

About Geoffery Emberling

Dr. Geoff Emberling is a Research Scientist at the Kelsey Museum of Archaeology, University of Michigan. He is a world-renowned archaeologist and museum curator who has directed excavations in Syria and Sudan, and who has developed numerous museum exhibitions on the ancient cultures of the Middle East and North Africa. In addition to traveling and working extensively in the region, he has led tours in Iraq, Syria, Jordan, Turkey, and Sudan.

He has recently appeared in a number of documentaries on archaeology in Sudan, including “Rise of the Black Pharaohs” (National Geographic), “Lost Kingdom of the Black Pharaohs” (Science Channel/BBC/Arte), and a new National Geographic film due to air in December 2020. He brings his deep knowledge, long experience, and great enthusiasm for archaeology and the modern cultures of the region to his tours.